

TECH WARRIOR ENTERPRISE

Tech Warrior CONNECT

Tech Warrior CONNECT serves several functions, including providing situational awareness of Air Force SBIR/ STTR Program opportunities, strategic introductions and collaboration, and face-to-face, immediate contact with and feedback from potential users. When appropriate, small business can leverage demonstration environments tailored to suit their individual needs.

Any small business with a government research and development contract, especially those with Air Force SBIR/STTR contract awards, are able to participate in the Tech Warrior Enterprise by working with its government point-of-contact or program manager, or by contacting twenterprise@parallaxresearch.org. Participation in Tech Warrior Enterprise events are free to business, who only pay their own travel, lodging and meal expenses.

Domain Expert Consultation

Small businesses receive access to subject matter experts from their intended user community, present their technology, and receive valuable input. This can include demonstration of a prototype or simple explanation of design concepts. Users provide feedback on how the technology might integrate best for their particular user group/requirements.

Network Integration

Small businesses integrate technology functions into a complex network environment. Tech Warrior Enterprise network engineers incorporate the technology with secure network infrastructure and provide feedback and suggestions as 'bugs' are worked out. Working with network engineers prepares the small business for integration into the more complex Tech Warrior OPS events.

Fundamental Test/Demonstration

Staff design and execute a simple test scenario for a small business' technology or prototype, allowing for collection of early data, allowing for failure, which accelerates fixes/changes that drive future development priorities. Leveraging Tech Warrior CONNECT to conduct early rudimentary testing enhances a small business' ability to showcase breakthroughs in more complex demonstrations.

John Matecki, Exercise Director for Tech Warrior Enterprise speaks with small business leaders from across the country during a recent event.
